TIPS from PAST PARTICIPANTS

Find out which places will break big bills---some smaller stores, taxis, buses work as many meals for y

- Feel free to have fun, but limit yourself to going out. A night in with friends is a great way to celebrate the weekend.
- Seek out the best cheap places to eat with friends in your program/embrace your inner chef.
- It's hard to know what the time to splurge is, but there will be a few purchases that are worth spending on. Budget so that you can buy that one special item. That being said, my most treasured study-abroad purchases are the demon

- Make a spreadsheet before you leave to keep track of what you spend day by day, that way you know exactly what you have spent at any given point and don't have to guess.
- I smuggled a jar of peanut butter in my suitcase, and it was one of the best life choices I've made. Do it, if you are at all a lover of peanut butter. That stuff is expensive in Europe.
- Bring more than one credit card as it may randomly be declined for no reason.
- Getting familiar with and used to what is an absurdly high price in the local currency is a great way of using your natural instinct of budgeting. It was good to remember that in any country overpriced is overpriced.
- If you can't use a dining hall, plan out how many times you want to cook or go out, I spent way too much money on food because I just didn't really think about it.
- Don't be afraid to spend money on good food. You have to eat. Don't be in a bad mood because you're eating poorly.
- Eat with your host family often! It's a wonderful way to get to know them, your host country and the culture better--and it's free!
- Be educated on how expensive each destination is, including where you choose to study abroad. I didn't think much about how much more I would be spending here than my friends in other places.

If you're going abroad, start saving now....like RIGHT NOW.

Get a credit or debit card with no international fees so you don't lose money just for